What to say

When you are introduced with the other functionaries

"I'm your Ah-Counter. I listen for filler words — um, ah, so, like, you know — and for double clutches, where a word or phrase gets restarted, from everyone who speaks today, not just our prepared speakers."

When you are called for your report

"Here is what I counted. This is not a criticism — a pause is stronger than a filler, and noticing them is how we lose them."

Everyone who speaks, not just the prepared speakers — Table Topics, evaluations, and your fellow functionaries all count.

A "double clutch" is a restart — the speaker begins a word or phrase, stops, and begins it again: "I— I think we should", "we should—we should go".
